ALBERTA RESEARCH COUNCIL:

$40,000 Pilot Plant Will Test Secret Iron Ore Refining Process

The provincial government has authorized the spending of $40,000 for a pilot plant to test a secret iron ore refining process developed by scientists at the Research Council of Alberta.

The pilot plant wil be built in Edmonton and will be used to test about 20 tons of low grade ore from the extesive deposits held by Premier Steel in the Peace River district.

Dr. C. P. Gravenor, Chief of the Earth Sciences Branch at the Research Council, said laboratory-bench work indicates the new refining method is "reasonably promising," He said it could be a step ahead of the R.N. method "in terms of quality."

The R.N. method was developed by a research corporation backed by Republic Steel and National Lead at Birmingham, Alabama. The method was used by Premier Steel to prepare several carloads of "sponge iron" briquettes for testing by the Japanese steel industry. Dr. Gravenor said the R.N. method is economic but the new Research Council process may produce a higher grade sponge iron.

Dr. Gravenor said the pilot plant is to be built in co-operation with private industry and will test the technical and economic feasibility of the laboratory-developed method. He said the government is carrying out this work becaus» "we have very large iron deposits and we want a basic iron and steel industry in the province."

Dr. Gravenor said it will be a year before the process can be disclosed in detail because it will take that long to obtain a patent. The patent would afford protection for the company which takes out a license from the government to develop the deposits.

Construction on the "modest" pilot plant will start in a month's time and Dr. Gravenor said "we hope to have some results by spring." The feasibility of the new method should be know one year from now.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Sir:

Another triumph in the field of politics was achieved by Mayor Maccagno M.P.P. when Secretary Creighton refused to take action or considered himself without the authority to postpone nomination day and allow a councillor to resign his seat and contest the mayor's position.

It appears that a number of taxpayers were dissatisfied with the Status Quo in town affairs and succeeded in persuading a member of the council to contest the mayor's seat. However, they found that their belated action was too late to qualify their candidate. He should have resigned his council seat 10 days before the nomination day.

Dismayed but unconvinced, these arounsed citizens with only a few hours to marshall their forces, hammered out a locument protesting the situation and secured eighty-one names to their petition. They were strongly opposed to another gift election.

Their efforts, too little and too late, were of course of no avail. However they have gained a measure of success in their futile protest by arousing the town from a civic lethargy that has plagued it for a number of years.

The escutcheon of an acclamation may not now bear the public acclaim that is a usual in gaining such a marked expression of public confidence. The loss by a whole town of an opportunity to express by their vote for or against, is no light matter, especially in a matter of a technicality. However, the blame for such a mishap is certainly not the fault of the mayor who has given freely of his time in public service and again was the only many in the town who was willing to act.

Inertia in public affairs rests with the electors who could and aught to have been prepared for such an eventuality. Though these few protesting citizens failed in their objective, there is still a chance to elect two new members to the council at election day on the 18th. I predict the heaviest civic vote in many years.

Henry T. Thompson.

THE Homemaker

By BERTHA M. McCUTCHEON

If you have an abundance of small carrots which will not keep why not use some of them for carrot marmalade: 3½ cups coarsely shredded carrots; 3 oranges; 1 lemon; sugar.

B. McCutcheon

Cook carrots in as little boiling water as possible. Drain. Shred rind of oranges and lemon finely (avoiding any white pulp). Section fruit and remove white membrance, then cut in small pieces. Measure carrots, orange and lamon rind and fruit; add ⅔ as much sugar. Boil gently to marmalade stage (when dropped from spoon forms a jelly-like syrup). Pour into hot sterilized jars and cover with hot paraffin. Yield: 3 jelly glasses.

Here are some short cuts and timesavers which will help you find the time to do something special. This could be learning a new handicraft, attending meetings of your favorite organization or spending more time with your children in family activity.

PLAN — Plan with the family, what should be done, who will do it, when, where and how. Family co-operation is necessary for essential tasks. A tidy house may be maintained if the whole family "pick-up" after themselves. Small children if provided with ample play equipment will cause a minimum of trouble. Time out for a rest is a must, and can be planned for.

STREAMLINED HOUSEKEEPING: A house, free of all unnecessary ornaments, gadgets and worn out equipment, will be easier to keep clean. Make sure that useful articles are placed in the hands of those who will use them.

PROPER EQUIPMENT — Do not try to do kitchen work without the proper equipment. A cheap knife, a patched-up pot, a dull can opener should be discarded for actually they cost you time and money because of their inefficient operation.

WASH DAY — Washing and ironing are time-consuming jobs. Consider them carefully to find simpler and easier methods. A laundry corner or room with supplies near at hand with tub, machine, ironer of proper height, and in good condition, helps to ease washing and ironing.

Sort clothes as to kind, fabrics, color and type of soil. Empty pockets, close zippers, fasten buttons, and snaps. Rub badly soiled areas with soap to loosen dirt. Use a detergent for grease.

Soak clothes before putting them into machine. When wringing clothes, drop similar articles into same baskets. Basket liners of plastic or paper will prevent stains and tears.

HANGING — Shake, then hang straight without wrinkles. Flat pieces should be folded 3" - 6" over the line to prevent bagging. Folding clothes when they are removed from the line will reduce ironing time.

IRONING — Do not make wrinkles by rolling sprinkled clothes too tightly; just sprinkle and fold neatly then cover to keep them damp. Use a clothes hanger and a dry rack for ironed clothes. A mending kit kept handy will speed up repairs. Sit to iron.

WA Notes

McMURRAY—St. Aiden's WA held its October meeting at the home of Mrs. S. D. Brooks. President Mrs. A. Mitchell in the chair. Plans were made to hold a travelling basket drive as the October money-making project.

Frankly, the scientists are getting ahead of the popular imagination.
